CIVIC DAY EXERCISES BEGIN AT TWO O'CLOCK

Street Parade to be Followed by Illustrated Address in Opera House by J. H. McFarland—The Program.

Today, March 10, is National Civic Day and the civic workers have planned to make the occasion one long to be remembered in Greensboro. For some time, under the auspices of the civic department of the Woman's Club, local civic workers have been making preparations for the occasion and there is no doubt but that the exercises planned will be a grand success.

The ladies have secured the presence of J. H. McFarland, president of the American Civic Association, who will deliver an illustrated lecture in the opera house this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The admission fee will be 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children.

The address of Mr. McFarland will be most interesting and enjoyable. It will be remembered that he gave a most profitable lecture on "City Beautiful," here some two years ago, this lecture being of great value in the movement to organize a civic league in the city. In addition to the illustrated address there will be short speeches by several Greensboro people.

A feature of the exercises will be a civic parade over the principal streets of the city. The parade will form at the Smith Memorial building. Several prizes have been offered for the most attractive turnouts by boys and girls and a number of merchants will have floats in the parade.

The program for the day follows:

Street Parade—2 to 3 p. m.

The parade will form and march in the following order:

1. Boy Scouts.
2. Carriage: Mrs. Kimball, chairman Civic League; Mr. McFarland, orator; Mayor Stafford.
3. Carriage: Mrs. Fairbrother, officer of Civic League; Dr. Wilson, health physician; Judge Eure.
4. Carriage: Mrs. Dorian Blair, officer Civic League; Mrs. Leslie Abbott, officer Civic League; Mr. Simpson, health officer.

6. Mounted Juniors.
7. Squad from Normal Training School.
8. Junior Civic League on foot.
9. Carriage: Officers of Junior Civic League.
10. Competing citizens.

The exercises to be held in the Grand opera house will begin promptly at 3 and will be conducted in the following order:

After the exercises at the Opera House a reception will be given at the Elks Hall, in honor of Dr. McFarland, visiting members of women's clubs and the husbands of members of the Greensboro club.

GLEE CLUB CLOSED LYCEUM SEASON

The Chicago Glee Club, which gave a most excellent musical program at West Market Street annex last night, proved to be one of the best of the seven attractions presented by the Greensboro Lyceum Committee this season, and was the last number of the only really successful lyceum course ever conducted in Greensboro.

It was successful both as to the character of the attractions and as to the receipts, the total receipts covering the cost of the course and all necessary running expenses.

The story of this effort is interesting. S. H. Bryan of the Alkahest System, had been coming to Greensboro for several years, but could never secure any business, no one being willing to

Slims Defeated by Champions

The Champions started their old record again last night when they defeated the Slims in the first game this season. The Champs won the first game by a margin of 28 pins and the second by a margin of 4 pins. When the total was figured up it showed the Champs had 1432 and the Slims 1393 pins—a majority of 39. The Slims are 46 pins ahead now but the Champs say in about one more game they will be ready to start again with the banner, and be the Champion duckpin rollers of Greensboro. Combs was the star on the Champs side last night, averaging ten per cent, making a total score of 306, while Knight was the star on the Slims, rolling a score of 305. Below is the totals.

BIDS RECEIVED FOR G. F. C. DORMITORY

BUILDING TO COST ABOUT $25,000
WILL FACE ODELL PLACE—TO BE FINISHED BY BEGINNING OF FALL TERM.

The building committee of Greensboro Female College met yesterday afternoon and opened the bids for the construction of the new dormitory decided upon some time ago. There were several bidders. Jan. T. Hunt was the lowest bidder for the building contract, Hunt Bros., for the plumbing and B. MacKenzie for the heating. The figures in the bids will not be made public until the trustees meet on March 21 and ratify the contract, but the cost of the building will be something less than $25,000. The plans were drawn for a building costing the above sum.

The dormitory will be a two-story brick building, containing 38 rooms, accommodating 76 students. The building will be erected in the rear of the main building and will face Odell Place. It is hoped to have the dormitory ready for use at the beginning of the fall term and work will be commenced as soon as the trustees ratify the contracts.

ROCKING TRAIN MADE FELONY BY LEGISLATURE

Wake County Factional Fight up Again—Supreme Court Decisions—Special Committee Report.

Raleigh, March 9.—The Phil G. Kelly Co., Richmond, has instituted suit against J. N. Stronach of this city for a balance of nearly $500 for liquors sold to Stronach during the past few months. Stronach conducts a soft drink saloon and cafe and the liquors involved are whiskeys, wines and beer. Stronach was tried some weeks ago for retailing whiskey but the prosecution failed to make a case against him.

Aftermath of Wake Political Fight.

A bitter political fight among Wake county Democratic factions has terminated in the dropping of W. E. Stinson as county road supervisor and election of H. G. Holding in his place by the county commissioners. Stinson was on the losing side in the last party primaries, famous for bitterness. Holding's friends also got a bill through the Legislature naming him county auditor, but some one else will have to be chosen by the commissioners for this office now.

Officers Commissioned for Charlotte Company.

Officers for the Hornet's Nest Riflemen, Charlotte, reorganized, are commissioned by Adjutant General Leinster. They are Jno. A. Parker, captain; B. S. Drane, lieutenant; Rufus M. Johnson, second lieutenant. The company was mustered in as Company D, First regiment.

Special Legislative Committee Report.

The special legislative committee for the investigation of the State's interest in the Mattamuskeet Railroad, the Elkin and Alleghany and Statesville Air Line Railroad, the Wilkesboro-Jefferson Turnpike and the State institutions under the criticisms passed upon these by the State board of internal improvements has reported to the Legislature that their investigation of the condition of ntw buildings complained of out at the Central Hospital for Insane here shows these buildings in good condition after two years' service with good general construction and at a cost not excessive by the recent state hospital commission. The committee considers the purchase of the lands adjoining the State hospital property by the commission a wise expenditure amply justified. This, too, in spite of the criticisms of the State board of internal improvements. The committee found no time for investigating the other properties involved—notably the railroads—but reports having secured the appointment of a legislative commission to do this during the two years before the assembly meets again and make report of conditions as they find them.

NEW COMPANY WILL MAKE BAND SAWING MACHINERY

The Standard Boiler & Machine Works, which was incorporated Wednesday with $125,000 capital, promises to become one of the most important industries in the city. The incorporators are John A. Kleemeier, O. C. Wyson, Dr. J. E. Logan, A. M. Scales and C. D. Benbow, and they will meet in a few days to elect directors and officers. The company will take over and operate the plant of the Greensboro Boiler & Machine Company and do a business in engines, boilers, saw mills and iron working machinery. In addition to this the plant will take up a special line of band sawing machinery for the Wyson & Miles Company. For many years the

High School Prize Essay

The Guilford Battle Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution announced last fall that they would give a $10 prize to the pupil of the City High School who would write the best essay on any phase of North Carolina history during the Revolutionary period; the prize to be awarded March 15, 1911.

J. T. JOHNSON STRUCK BY TRAIN, INSTANTLY KILLED

Well Known Citizen Killed at Dairy Street Crossing While Attempting to Drive Over Railroad.

John Turner Johnson, 65 years of age, was instantly killed by Northbound train No. 44 yesterday morning at 9:15 o'clock at the Dairy street crossing, half a mile west of the city limits. The train was going at a lively rate of speed at the time and the body was carried on the pilot for several hundred yards before the train could be brought to a standstill. The left leg of the unfortunate man was broken, while his head was horribly crushed and his backbone splintered, so terrific was the blow received.

The remains were taken to the undertaking establishment of E. Poole and prepared for burial, after which they were taken to the residence of the deceased, Yaquina street. The funeral will be held from his late residence this afternoon at 1:15 o'clock, conducted by Rev. W. F. Staley, assisted by Elder Denny. The remains will be taken to Burlington on the 3:20 train for interment at Mt. Holly church near that place.

Mr. Johnson, "Jack" as he was familiarly known, was well known in Greensboro where he had lived for many years. He was a kind-hearted Christian gentleman and was liked by all who knew him. He is survived by three children, Mrs. Sullivan, of Salisbury; John D. and Miss Martha Johnson, of this city. His death is all the more sad because of the fact that his wife died only a few months ago.

Fore some months Mr. Johnson had been in ill-health, but his condition grew better and about two weeks ago he secured employment with the Washington Steam Bakery as driver. He was on his rounds delivering bread when the fatal accident occurred. Mr. Johnson was always very cautious about crossing the railroad and why he did not see the approaching train is a mystery.

Train No. 44 was in charge of Conductor Smith, of Charlotte, and Engineer Wingate, of Spencer. The train was coming along at 30 or 40 miles an hour and the engineer saw the wagon some distance ahead. As soon as he saw the driver going on the track he threw on the brakes and reversed. However, the speed was such that it was impossible to come to a stop although the speed was reduced considerably. The pilot struck the delivery wagon squarely, separating it from the horse which escaped unhurt. The wagon and driver were carried on the pilot until the train was brought to a standstill. The horse trotted some distance from the track and stopped in a yard.

FARMERS GATHER IN RALEIGH FOR DEMONSTRATION WORK

Raleigh, March 9.—There are here for sessions today and tomorrow forty odd farmers, selected from among the progressive agriculturalists in the counties east of Greensboro, receiving special instruction in farm demonstration work in order that they may take a hand more effectively in the farm demonstration work carried on by the United States agricultural department through this State. The farmers here are in charge of this work in their respective counties. The work is through the cultivation of demonstration plots in the various counties and these farmers devote about eight months each year to the work. There are a number of government experts of the agricultural department here taking part in instructing the county representatives.

Want Dr. Chapman In Charlotte

Charlotte, March 9.—At a recent meeting of the Ministerial Association it was decided to invite Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman to come to Charlotte some time between September of this year and the first of next year, to hold a union revival meeting. Mr. Chapman is one of the world's noted evangelists, and if he can be secured no doubt great interest in the meetings would be manifested throughout the city. Practically all the ministers in the city have signed their names to the petition, as the head of their respective churches, and the support of the noted religious speaker will no doubt be of the best, in event he can be secured to come during the time mentioned above.

The Union meetings held in Charlotte in the past have been strikingly successful. The meetings were always held in the past after long intervals of time, and when Charlotte was a much smaller city than it is today. If Mr. Chapman accepts the invitations to come to Charlotte to hold the revival it will no doubt result in the awakening of great and lasting interest in the church work of the city.

ELECTRIC BITTERS THE BEST FOR BILIOUSNESS AND KIDNEYS

TWO DUELS.

The Second One Was to Avenge the Victim of the First.

A certain English gentleman who was a regular frequenter of the greenroom of Drury Lane theater in the days of Lord Byron's committee and who always stood quietly on the hearth rug there with his back to the fire was in his usual place one night when a narrative was related by another gentleman, newly returned from the continent, of a barrier duel that had taken place in Paris.

A young Englishman, a mere boy, had been despoiled in a gaming house in the Palais Royal, had charged a certain gaming count with cheating him, had gone out with the count, had wasted his fire and had been slain by the count under the frightful circumstances of the count's walking up to him, laying his hand on his heart, saying, "You are a brave fellow—have you a mother?" and on his replying in the affirmative remarking coolly, "I am sorry for her," and blowing his victim's brains out.

The gentleman on the hearth rug paused in taking a pinch of snuff to hear this story and observed with great placidity, "I am afraid I must kill that rascal."

A few nights elapsed, during which the greenroom hearth rug was without him, and then he reappeared precisely as before and only incidentally mentioned in the course of the evening, "Gentlemen, I killed that rascal."

He had gone over to Paris on purpose, had tracked the count to the same gaming house, had thrown a glass of wine in his face in the presence of all the company assembled there, had told him that he had come to avenge his young compatriot and had done it by putting the count out of this world and coming back to the hearth rug as if nothing had happened.

Russia's Butterfly Belief.

Small boys and girls in Russia often do not have the joy of butterfly chasing or collecting, for the popular and pretty belief of the peasants is that these swarms of fragile, lovely insects are the earthbound souls of the dead, compelled to linger for some minor expiation of sin. As the nurses of the children of all below royalty are from the peasant class, they impress on them at an early age how wicked it would be to catch and torture a soul and thus imbue them with a superstition that lasts until they are well grown.—New York Tribune.

BLUFFS AND PLAYS DEAD.

But There's a Fatal Flaw in the Hog Nosed Snake's Acting.

When you find a hog nosed snake flattened out upon the soil in his anxiety to absorb all the sunshine that he can he immediately adopts a policy of "bluff." He first inflates his body by a deep draft of air. Then he flattens his head and expands his neck to three times its proper width. Next he strikes angrily toward the intruder and hisses with malignant fury. The average pedestrian naturally retreats with a feeling of gratitude for the danger signals so unmistakably imprinted by a kindly Providence upon the deadly members of the reptile race.

A good field naturalist will quietly advance his bare hand to the reptile's head, because he knows that this snake can neither be induced to give a poisonous bite nor a bite of any kind. Seeing that the observer cannot be intimidated, the snake then opens his jaws and acts as if he had been injured. Convulsive spasms ripple down his spine. He writhes and twists as if transplanted by the agonies of death, and, turning over on his back, the last convulsion dies away along the tail. Now, nothing in nature looks more dead than a snake lying with the ivory white of his belly plates turned upward to the sky, and the hog nosed snake will simulate death so patently that you may carry him by the tail or hang his body on a fence and he will swing in the wind and give no sign of life for an hour or more.

But this clever acting has one fatal flaw. If you place him on the ground with the belly downward he will twist over on his back again. He has such a fixed idea that "belly plates skyward" is the correct pose for a serpent's corpse that, although supposed to be lifeless, he will turn over on his back a dozen times if you as perseveringly persist in laying him on his crawling surface. His zeal for the perfection of mimicry blinds him to the obvious truth that dead snakes stay where they are put.—Century Path.

A Little Musician and a Big, Big Bass

Boys and girls will surely be amused at the comical picture of a little mite of a girl playing on the double bass tuba. That is, she looks as though she were playing, but it is extremely doubtful if she had breath enough to fill that vast horn. As is seen, it is larger than herself, though she seems to hold it without difficulty. Apparently she is making a brave effort to extract music from its profound depths. But the truth is she sang in the instrument, and what a queer lot of sounds she must have produced! Her childish treble, broadened and deepened, passing through the tuba, doubtless delighted all those fortunate enough to hear it. The little girl is the daughter of an English bandsman, and the picture was taken at the national band festival held not long ago at the Crystal Palace in London.

Story of a Tame Bear.

Tom is the name of a big tame bear which is owned by a Pennsylvania farmer. The bear has a pen between the house and barn, and a long chain fastened to his collar lets him play all around the pen. One moonlight night the farmer was awakened by a great growling and rattling of the chain. Looking out of the window and seeing nothing, he shouted to Tom to keep quiet, but just then Tom broke his chain, ran to the barnyard fence and quickly climbed it. The farmer pulled on his clothes and ran out to the barnyard and found Tom trying to make a wild drop a sheep which he had stolen from the yard. The sheep was bleating and kicking in the bear's paws and Tom was dancing around the thief, cuffing him and doing his utmost to head him off. The wild bear dodged to the right and left and then suddenly dropped on all fours, seized the sheep by the neck with his teeth and started to drag it along the ground. Tom sprang upon his back at once and bit him in the neck, and then the wild bear let go the sheep and gave battle to Tom. During the fight the farmer ran to the barn and got an ax, but for a long time he had no chance to use the weapon. Finally he saw his chance and buried it in the wild bear's neck, and Tom then easily finished him.

Problems With Forty-five.

How can 45 be divided into four such parts that, if to the first part you add 2, from the second part you subtract 2, the third part you multiply by 2 and the fourth part divide by 2, the sum of the addition, the remainder of the subtraction, the product of the multiplication and the quotient of the division be all equal?

The first is 8, to which add 2—10.
The second is 12; subtract 2—10.
The third is 5, multiplied by 2—10.
The fourth is 20, divided by 2—10.

Subtract 45 from 45 and leave 45 as a remainder.

Remarkable Fish.

The curiously named trigger fish are plentiful in Japanese waters. They are of the balistes genus, and their popular name is derived from the trigger-like peculiarity of the second spine of the dorsal fin. When the fin is erected the first ray, or spine, which is very thick and strong, maintains its elevated position so firmly that it cannot be pressed down by any degree of force, but if the second spine is pressed the first immediately falls down with a spring, like the hammer of a gunlock when the trigger is pulled. These fish are marked in a striking manner, some of them being very richly colored—ashen gray, blue and gold.

A Short Delay.

A little boy set out for school one morning, and he crept along the way as slowly as a snail could ever go.

He pouted, and he lifted up his voice, and then he wept.

And laid the dust with all his tears, which came in steady flow.

"I do not want to go to school," he whimpered in despair.

"I want to stay outdoors and play with other little boys."

I will not go!" He sat down resolutely then and there.

As if forever, but just then there came an awful noise.

It was the bell a-ringing, calling children to the school.

And threatening to punish them if they should stay away.

And little boy with all his not resentment grown quite cool,

Got on his feet and dried his eyes and pattered on his way.

Telephone Invitations.

When accepting an invitation over the telephone it is the part of wisdom to follow it with a written acceptance, in which the day, date and hour are repeated. Only in this way can a woman be certain that no error is made in the time, and the sense of security given is worth the effort.

Telephonic invitations will always appear to be informal and sometimes are, but a woman will have no difficulty in deciding the point if she gives heed to the hour appointed. A luncheon at half past 1 o'clock, to play bridge afterward, may be regarded as formal; dinner at any time after a quarter to 7 is also formal. Earlier than these hours is considered to be informal.

Bridesmaids Gowns.

It is customary for a bride to select the style and material of the bridesmaids' dresses, and if the girls are not well enough off to have many dresses she should assuredly be careful to choose styles that are not too pronounced, so that the dresses may be worn on other occasions. Complaints about this are not infrequent from girls who have acted as bridesmaids when they were obliged to buy dresses they could never use again on account of the combination of colors or the exaggerated mode fancied at the moment by the bride.

BLOUSE NEWNESS.

A Stunning Evening Model In Velvet and Silver Lace.

VELVET AND SILVER LACE BLOUSE

A lovely combination of velvet and silver lace is to be found in the evening waist pictured. The foundation is of coarse silver net and the floor draped bodice of heavy silver lace. The short kimono sleeves are edged with silver ball fringe. A heavy silver cord ornament studded with rhinestones through which is drawn the cyclamen colored velvet relieves the one tone effect and adds chic to the blouse. A new French feature is the side sash of silver net edged with ball fringe.

Woman's World

No Career Greater Than Home-making, Says Miss Tarbell.

By J. E. Purdy.

MISS IDA M. TARSELL.

This is what Miss Ida Tarbell, the biographer of Standard Oil and author of "Life of Lincoln," has to say about woman's civic duty:

"The most valuable citizen in the world is the woman who stays at home and properly brings up a family of children.

"A woman's first and most important duty to the state is the same as it always has been since the beginning of things—the rearing of good citizens.

"There is no achievement, literary, artistic, what you will, which a woman can perform that is of the same vital significance to the nation as the rearing of a family of mentally, morally, physically healthy boys and girls. There is no profession containing such real honor for a woman as that of homemaking. And it is the great national job for the majority of us. Let us see that we stick to it. We can't do anything better."

Miss Tarbell's interviewer here interposed that it was not possible for all women to marry, and she was asked what civic duties were best performed by the single ones.

Miss Tarbell said: "They still serve the state in many ways. The highest service that they can perform is to become teachers. Women do excellent work on boards of hospitals, reformatories, prisons, asylums and schools. Indeed, there should be a proportion of women on all such boards, though there should be men also.

"As factory and milk and tenement house inspectors women do splendid service. There should be many more women probation officers. All state institutions taking care of women and children should be largely administered by women."

Household Economics.

To make biscuits light—drench with gasoline and ignite before serving.

To keep servants—chloroform, and lock in the cellar.

To get rid of peddlers—buy all they have.

To remove fruit stains from linen—use the scissors.

To keep rats out of the pantry—put all the food in the cellar.

To entertain women visitors—let them read all your private papers.

To entertain men visitors—feed the brutes.

To keep children at home—lock 'em in the garret.

To keep hubby at home—lock up all his clothes.

To prevent accidents in the kitchen—fill the kerosene can with water.

To stop leaks in pipes—send in a hurry up for the nearest plumber.

To economize on coal—get a gas range.

To test freshness of eggs—drop on hard surface.

To propitiate the janitor—you can't do it.—Lippincott's.

Large Waists.

The Venus of Milo dressed in Parisian modes might pass muster now. Thirty inches is none too big for a waist. Paris made the law, and every one followed it joyously. Even the stags, pull as you may, will not give you a small waist. It is even rumored that Frenchwomen pad the front of the figure to cause it to appear straight, but the one desideratum is to keep the hips to the straight line.

Catherine de' Medici when she introduced the bone corset made thirteen inches the right size for the waist, and many a woman at court sacrificed her life to attain it. There is no necessity to have long bones to keep in the hips. Corset or brocade may be cut so as to confine the dimensions. Digestive organs are now left full and easy play.

Women and Suffragettes.

On his visit to America Father Vaughan of London (called by Chesterton "the Mayfair priest who makes the comfortable classes feel uncomfortable") was asked, "Would you give votes to women?"

"I would make no difficulty about giving votes to women," he answered. "But, you understand," he added, with twinkling eye, "once you give votes to women the suffragettes would be wanting them also."—Success.

Good Form

Correct Letter Writing.

A communication or gift received by a person in social life must be acknowledged. This is a rule so emphatic that it has no exceptions.

And equally is it the rule that if the communication be a card or note it must be responded to in precisely the same form. Acting upon this, no woman need fear making a mistake in this branch of her social duties.

A visiting card, slight as it is, should not be ignored unless it bears the letters "P. P. C." In that instance it is an answer to courtesies received as well as an announcement of departure and therefore might be said to close communication.

A receipt of a card following an event of importance to the family requires a card in return. For example, after a birth or death or other occasions less momentous it is not uncommon for friends to post visiting cards as indicating that they are aware of the happening. Sometimes merely a word or line is written on the card, as "Condolences," "Felicitations," according to the nature of the event. The return card, which should be sent within a couple of days, may have the word "Thanks" written on it, or it may be blank except for the engraved name and address.

It is not considered good form to answer a note with a card save after a death, when a bereaved family is permitted to make little effort, and its members may spare themselves the work of writing notes.

Invitations are always to be answered in the same form in which they are received, so that if a note comes written in the first person the response also should contain the personal pronoun. More formal invitations, in which the third person is employed, require the third in return.

Incidentally a person who is unaccustomed to writing this most formal communication, which takes the third person, must be careful that in answering the response continues to contain the third at the end as at the beginning.

More than one person has committed the error of beginning correctly with the third and ending with the first person.

A Few Table Rules.

A woman who gives much attention to diet and lives up to the best ideas in this line has the following rules neatly framed in a conspicuous place in her dining room where the family may be impressed with them:

First.—Five or ten minutes before beginning to eat a meal drink a glass of cold water.—This will leave the stomach before the food reaches it and will carry with it any mucus which has accumulated since last eating, thus leaving the walls of the stomach clear and ready to be activated by the newly arrived food.

Second.—Never take a second cup of coffee. You will not care for a second if you moisten your food sufficiently with saliva. Take dinner coffee always with dessert or after rather than before, as it thus aids digestion.

Third.—Never wash your food down with liquids, but masticate each mouthful well and it will be sufficiently moist and will promote the flow of gastric juices, thereby preparing the stomach still further for its work.

Fourth.—Never eat "until too full." By a little attention to the matter you will learn when to stop and thus avoid the consequences of overeating. One mouthful too much is apt to cause disarrangement of the digestive system. This may seem like putting it rather strong, but you know that even a teaspoonful too much will cause a dish to overflow, and the same applies to the closely packed organs of the human body, where disarranged gastric fluids will produce illness.

WHERE HIS THOUGHTS WERE

The mother of the first child went into the nursery and found her husband gazing earnestly upon the baby. Overcome by this evidence of tender father-love, tears filled her eyes. Her arms stole softly about his neck. He started at her touch, murmuring dreamily, Dearest, I can't understand how they can sell this crib for only $8.00.

The Telegram is entered at the Post-office in Greensboro, North Carolina, for transmission through the mails as Second Class Matter.

The Ledger-Dispatch says Norfolk has been having fifty-seven varieties of weather. Some down here.

Now they are asking, "Who is Walter Fisher?" The answer that he is Ballinger's successor ought to be sufficient.

Another thing—this movement against the Mexican border affords our old friend, General Len Wood, a glorious opportunity to secure additional publicity.

One-fourth of the army of the United States is moving on the Mexican border. Anybody can see the finish of the Mexican border if trouble is started down there.

South Carolina grants no divorces, but the Spartanburg Herald says marriage is just as popular there as it is elsewhere, and explains it by adding that when a man's married to a South Carolina girl he never wants a divorce.

Jim Sherman and Governor Colquitt opposed the resignation of Mr. Bailey. The remainder of more than ninety millions of citizens of this country seemed to be perfectly satisfied to let the resignation stand.

Governor Wilson of New Jersey appointed a dead man to office. The public will be duly surprised to hear of this, as it was supposed that one of the chief aims of Governor Wilson would be to weed out the dead ones.

It has been decided that Atlee Pomerene's election as United States Senator in Ohio is legal. While Senator Pomerene's name sounds like it might have been extracted from a modern novel, the Senator is a good Democrat and an able man, it is said.

What's the matter with Durham? The Herald says: "We would welcome any sort of a change in this town, without being particular as to what it was." Thought Durham was an altogether satisfactory town as it stands, without any changes whatever.

The Columbia State wants to know if Senator Bailey had a string tied to his resignation. Joe evidently thought he had, but there is a difference of opinion as to whether this is a fact or not. It is contended in some quarters that he will have to be elected or appointed in order to legally hold the office again.

Atlanta raised $800,000 for the Young Men's Christian Association work in that city. Atlanta is often criticised, frequently by far less progressive and enterprising cities, on account of the fact that natural gas is one of its chief products, but it must be admitted that Atlanta never does anything except in a princely way.

The Columbia State expresses the opinion that Works, the New California Senator, is probably jeweled and wants to know what the faith of California would be without Works. Then the said State had a spasm of remorse and said that these remarks should be attributed to some frivolous newspaper, like the Houston Post or the Atlanta Georgian.

This is the worst news received recently. The Greene and Gaynor case is to be opened again. Greene and Gaynor are seeking release from the Atlanta federal prison under a pauper oath, claiming they are unable to pay the fine imposed when they were convicted. The United States government believes Greene and Gaynor have secreted a large amount of the money of which the government was defrauded, and announces that evidence in support of this contention will be forthcoming. The case of Greene and Gaynor bids fair to hang on as long as Mr. Ballinger clung to his office.

PURCHASED VOTERS DISFRANCHISED.

The Supreme Court of Ohio has affirmed the decision of Judge Blair, who disfranchised eleven hundred citizens of Adams county, that State, after they were convicted of having sold their votes. The matter was carried to the higher court on constitutional grounds by some of the disfranchised citizens, but they lost the case and their disfranchisement stands.

The final decision in the Adams county case furnishes a wholesome lesson for the entire country.

Vote-buyers and vote-sellers ought to be disfranchised by the laws in every State in the Union. It is morally as great a crime to buy a vote as it is to sell, and the laws should make no distinction between the man who makes a commodity of his franchise and the purchaser of it. The Adams county affair touched but one side of this proposition; as in Ohio, as in other States where it is a violation of the law to traffic in the franchise, the statute applies to but one of the parties to the transaction—the seller.

NEWSPAPER OPINION.

UNCLE JOE.

We like the speech that Champ Clark made about Uncle Joe Cannon at the death-bed of the Sixty-first Congress, and we like the speech Uncle Joe made in reply.

We think Uncle Joe will have a place in history among the great Speakers of the House of Representatives. He will not rank with Clay or Reed, but he will rank far above a majority of the men who have held that office.

We are pleased to say this about Uncle Joe because we have had to say many unpleasant things about him during the last eight years. There are few political questions about which The World and Uncle Joe have been able to agree. In fact, we still regard him as an obstinate old reactionary whose school of politics is as dead as the dinosaurs and who represents the worst tendencies in the Republican party.

For all that, as a Speaker he had brains, he had courage, he had decision, he had parliamentary skill and he knew his trade. We hope he will be happy as he sits back in his chair watching Champ Clark drive the wild horses.

It is hoped that the 121 defeated candidates for Congress, "lame ducks" they are called, will not hang about Washington, quacking for something to do. The most pitiful sights at the national capital are the has-beens.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

If Postmaster-General Hitchcock had attacked the "Household Hints" and "How to Behave" departments of the magazines instead of the advertising sections the blow at civilization would have been even more terrible.—Washington Star.

Cutchin For Commissioner

Another candidate enters the commissioners contest today, in the person of J. R. Cutchin, a prominent resident of the city, who desires to fill the office of Commissioner of Public Safety. Mr. Cutchin has been a member of the street commission for a couple of years and is familiar with municipal affairs in the departments over which he would have control as commissioner.

Other announcements of candidates for commissions are anticipated and the list will doubtless be augmented daily for some time to come.

WHAT NORTH CAROLINA EDITORS ARE SAYING.

It is now Congressman Stedman, and no district in the country will have a more courtly and distinguished representative than the Imperial Fifth.—Webster's Weekly.

There are only 200,000 Quakers in the United States, yet there are nine members of that faith in Congress. The basis of representation in Congress being 200,000 persons, it will be seen that these good people have an aptness for politics.—Webster's Weekly.

A New York man who violated the law, begged the police to lock him up, exclaiming "I am a menace to society." All violators of the law are menaces to society but the trouble about it is they won't acknowledge it and ask to be locked up.—Wilmington Star.

Editor Farris, of the High Point Enterprise, is trying to find out the most popular baby in High Point. We warn him in time to let some one else assume all the responsibility in standing for whatever decision is made, because it's dangerous to play with fire. Every mother thinks her child the prettiest and most popular and the only thing to do, and be happy, is to agree as to this when talking to the mothers separately, and keep powerful quiet when you see them collectively.—Wilmington Dispatch.

AN EXAMPLE TO BE FOLLOWED.

When Hon. Charles M. Stedman was nominated as Lieutenant-Governor, he resigned his position as attorney of three railroads, and had no strings tied to his resignation. That example ought to be followed by every public officer, particularly by every legislator and every presiding officer. If they do not follow that precedent of their own motion, the people in their conventions or by statute must and the unseemly spectacle of railroad lawyers and agents in the Legislature voting for their employers and against the interests of the people. Every piece of progress or good legislation offered in the General Assembly this year affecting public service corporation was killed, maimed or strangled, and the attempt to give control of the coming power and light company "died a bornin'."—Raleigh News and Observer.

SOME ONE HAD BLUNDERED.

It is too early to look over the scene of battle, perhaps, and too soon, no doubt, to view the wreckage left in the wake of the whirling conflict, but one derelict can be seen plainly. It is both neglect and derelict. It represents the failure of the State Senate to adopt the Kellum House bill calling for an investigation of the sale of the old Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley Railroad. No harm could have possibly resulted from such an investigation, and surely the innocent should be only too willing for exoneration. But, on the contrary, now harm can result, from growing suspicion, from charges made that have neither been proven or disproven—simply through lack of opportunity. If the charges had been brought by hoodlums, or had been made by men of small capacities, inattention might have been justified, but such was not the case. Men of high standing in North Carolina's commercial world, men of throbbing pulse and active minds for the progress of their State, who stand for something in the sphere of endeavor and accomplishment—and not four or five such men, but dozens of them—asked for this investigation. It looks to us, and would still look to us from a common sense standpoint through the dazzling haze of constitutional darts that might fill the air, that the Senate, representing in vital part the sovereign State of North Carolina, has denied a most just request; turned down a right. We do not know that there was anything wrong in any way connected with the sale, and it is well founded in law that every man is presumed innocent until proven guilty, but the very fact that people do not know much about it should call for the investigation. The innocent have nothing to lose and much to gain by investigation. The innocent would gain much in allaying suspicion, by establishing beyond doubt that they are right, if they are. Exoneration as a great thing. In not allowing even a disapproval of the charges the Senate added another blunder to the series it has made—blunders of omission.—Wilmington Dispatch.

SCARCITY OF FARM LABOR IS FEARED IN MECKLENBURG

Charlotte, March 9.—Farmers throughout this section are just a little uneasy lest they will be unable to secure labor for their farms during the summer. The building of the interurban lines, so think many, will take from the tillers of the soil negroes who would otherwise pick cotton or plough corn. For it is a psychological fact, say these sturdy men who are the backbone of the State, that a negro will leave a steady position on the farm for one with a gang "on de railroad."

"I have several negroes hired and they have signed contracts with me for the year," said one prominent planter this week. "But there is always a time when we farmers have to depend on day labor, and I greatly fear we will be handicapped in this respect this year. The negro who will not sign a contract for a year, but who can be gotten for a day or a week in a pinch, is just the one who will go to the railroad for work. He will hurt us some, I am afraid."

This has been the experience with farmers in the past and they are expecting a repetition of it this year. As a result they are signing contracts with more hands for six months and 12 months. The work on the interurban from Charlotte to Kings Mountain will begin at once, and a great number of laborers will be needed. Just whether the contractors will bring with them much foreign labor is a question not as yet settled. The farmers are hoping that the bulk of the laborers will be Italians, who will work just as cheap as the farm negro, and who would leave the cotton pickers to the plantations.

SHOES AND HAIR-CUTS

"The shoe business is just like a barber shop. Give a man a poor hair-cut and he may not find it out till he gets home and his wife makes him turn 'round seven times for inspection. But you can bet the next hair-cut will be in another shop. Sell a man a pair of 'good-lookers' which will not stand up under wear, and he may not know it for a few days, but you might as well put a smallpox sign on your store and expect him to visit it as to hope for him to come back for another pair."

We sell the famous Bostonian shoes at this store, the kind that make a man come back for another pair and keep on coming back again and again. Hundreds of the best people in this city long ago acquired the Bostonian habit and wear these excellent shoes season after season, summer and winter.

The new styles for spring are here ready for your inspection. Oxfords and high cuts, in Gun Metal, Vici Patent Colt and Tan, $3.50, $4.00, $4.50 and $5.00.

A Rug From Mazandaran

Its Wonderful Powers
Are Verified

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

As the steamer drew away from Constantinople and that fairy city and the Golden Horn faded from view the little group of tourists on the Neptune turned to one another with a cheerful sense of companionship born of many days spent on board the hospitable vessel and other days employed in pleasant excursions ashore.

The Neptune carried a party of several hundred travelers, and her charter covered every port of interest in the Orient. Constantinople was the last stopping place, and now they were homeward bound.

Professor Traile and his pretty daughter Madeline were joined by several others whom they had found congenial during the tour. At times they had been separated for a few days, as each party followed its own particular itinerary beyond the principal stopping places. Once more they gathered their steamer chairs into close proximity about the professor and fell to talking of the city they had just left.

There was Alexander Felton, tall and lean and clever looking and very glad to be with Madeline Traile once more. There were James Hanford and his wife, seekers after health and recreation; Miss Emeline Gray, a middle-aged spinster, whose fad was collecting odd rings from every country she visited, and lastly there was young Arthur Clayton, Miss Gray's nephew.

"I just hated to leave Constantinople," sighed Mrs. Hanford, "there were such heaps of things I wanted to buy, so many queer, smelly, oriental looking boxes and jars, such sweet silver trifles, and some of it looked as if it might have been made centuries ago and worn by—who knows?"

"All that stuff is made right in the bazaars under your very noses," explained Arthur Clayton practically. "A fellow told me all about it—how they give 'em that aged look."

"Don't tell me about it," cautioned Miss Gray severely. "I don't want the romance knocked out of my adventures. Really, Arthur, you do turn things inside out in such a manner I wish I had left you at home! Can't you realize you've been in the land of enchantment? Did you never read your 'Arabian Nights'?"

Clayton joined in the laugh at his own expense and turned to Alexander Felton.

"I say, Mr. Felton, we haven't heard what you've been about for the last month or two. You dropped off at Constantinople on the outward trip."

"Yes," said Felton, "I made a little journey into Persia by way of the Black sea and Trebizond. I arrived in Constantinople just in time to catch my steamer."

"Persia!" exclaimed Madeline with a little catch of the breath. "You must have had a perfectly lovely time. Oh, dad, I wish we might have gone there!"

Professor Traile exchanged a glance with Felton. "Sounds very romantic, my dear, but really the traveling is very rough—not fit for a woman, eh, Felton?"

The other nodded. "I rode horseback most of the way from Trebizond to Teheran."

"Did you find any treasures, Felton?" asked Hanford with interest. "You said you were after something especially nice."

Felton hesitated as he glanced about the little group of friendly faces. Then he smiled as the call for dinner emptied the decks. "After dinner, if you will meet me here, I will show you what I brought from Persia."

"Is there a story in it?" asked Madeline as they moved toward the companionway.

"A dozen," he said lightly. "You may choose to add another," he concluded in a lower tone.

Somewhat mystified and with a strange, sweet content in her heart, Madeline avoided his eyes and went below.

After dinner, when they had gathered about Felton on the moonlit deck, where they sat apart, they demanded that he show them his treasure from Persia. For answer he drew from his pocket a thick, square packet which unfolded into rather a large silky rug, which he threw on the deck between them.

"A Persian prayer rug!" cried Miss Gray eagerly. "How perfectly lovely! If we had known you were going you might have fetched one for each of us—if you would have been so kind."

"I would gladly have fulfilled such a commission," said Felton gravely. "But there happens to be no other in the world just like this one."

"Not in the world!" echoed Madeline dreamily. She leaned over and touched the silky surface, exclaiming at the silvery sheen melting into rose and pale blue and green. It almost seemed as if the rug palpitated with life, so changeable were its colors, so wonderful its intricate weaving and delicate harmony of pattern.

"Tell us about it, Felton, if you don't mind," suggested the professor after a little pause.

"It can be told in a few words. I heard of its presence in an obscure village in Mazandaran."

"Has it a history?" asked Mrs. Hanford.

"It is called 'the carpet of truth.'"

It is said to have belonged to one of the favorites of an ancient ruler, and its principal virtue is that whoever sits upon it is compelled to tell the truth while he sits thereon."

"That would prove invaluable when examining witnesses," observed Mr. Hanford, with twinkling eyes.

"I have thought of that," said Felton quietly. "Now that I have told you about my 'find' suppose some of the rest of you relate what is the greatest treasure you have discovered in your travels."

"And be sure to sit on the carpet of truth while you're telling it," advised Clayton, with a laugh.

"I'm willing to, for one," agreed his aunt. "I want to test the verity of Mr. Felton's tradition. May I?"

"Certainly, Miss Gray," returned Felton courteously, although apparently somewhat surprised by the request. "There; I will place this chair over the carpet, and you may sit there with your feet well within its border."

"No, no. I wish to sit directly on the carpet, just like an eastern story teller," cried Miss Gray, and so she disposed herself amid much merriment.

"Of course my story is about a ring," she began. "This is the one. I picked it up in Constantinople only yesterday, and it involved an adventure." She gave the ring to Mrs. Hanford, and that lady passed it around the group with an exclamation of delight.

When it came to Professor Traile he studied it a long time with a peculiar smile on his kindly face.

"What is the inscription?" asked the professor quietly as he dropped it in Miss Gray's outstretched hand.

"Chaldean. So he told me," replied that lady, dreamily regarding the ring.

"He? Now for the adventure," teased Clayton.

"I had forgotten that I must tell it," said Miss Gray, slipping the ring on her finger. "Well, yesterday as I was strolling among the bazaars I came to the street of the silversmiths. I was looking at the wares of one merchant and trying to select a ring for my collection that might be very unique when a brown hand was thrust into my own and left behind it this turquoise ring."

"How romantic!" breathed Mrs. Hanford softly.

"You would have thought so if you could have seen the donor—a tall, very thin man dressed in a native costume. I confess I cannot place his nationality, for he wore the baggy trousers and loose garments of the Turk, the muffling burnoose of the Arab."

"Did he wear green slippers, Miss Gray?" asked Madeline Traile, with sudden interruption of the narrative.

"Yes; I believe he did, for when he left me I looked after him, wondering what it could all mean and thinking there must be a mistake. All I noticed was his great height and his flying green slippers. And that is all."

"No, no!" exclaimed Professor Traile. "What did your stranger say? Are we not to know the whole story?"

"It was nothing—only some silly rubbish you would not care to hear," evaded Miss Gray.

"Aunt Emeline, you are sitting on the carpet of truth," reminded her nephew. "What said your cavalier?"

"I have forgotten," faltered Miss Gray, her sweet face drooping.

"Oh, Aunt Emeline!" chided Clayton, then hastily, "What is the matter?"

Miss Gray was staring at them with frightened eyes and closely locked lips, to which she pointed with a hopeless gesture. "Can't you speak?" roared Clayton.

She shook her head despairingly.

Then Alexander Felton's voice broke the silence. When he spoke he seemed to be quoting from some authority which no one recognized. "He who speaks the truth then shall his tongue be loosened," he said softly.

Miss Gray seemed to hear, for a lovely smile broke over her face, and all at once she spoke:

"I will tell the truth. He said: 'Wear this for me. It is a Chaldean stone and came from the tomb of a high priest.' Then he ran away. Now that I have told the truth may I not leave this carpet?"

"Did it really happen? Could you not speak?" cried Mrs. Hanford nervously.

"Not a word until I spoke the truth," averred Miss Gray solemnly.

"Then please put it away for tonight," exclaimed Mrs. Hanford.

"It's growing late anyway," said Felton practically. "The moon has disappeared, and I believe it is blowing up a squall."

Hanford and his wife, followed by young Clayton, moved forward, while Professor Traile walked quietly by Miss Gray's side. When they were in a quiet spot he halted, with her hand in his arm.

"Your cavalier—did you recognize him, Miss Gray?" he asked in a low tone.

"Yes, professor," she said softly. "You poor, shy, bashful man, where did you get those wonderful garments?"

"I always wear them on such occasions to better mingle with the people. Er—Emeline—how about the ring, eh?"

"I am wearing it. Is that not enough?" she whispered.

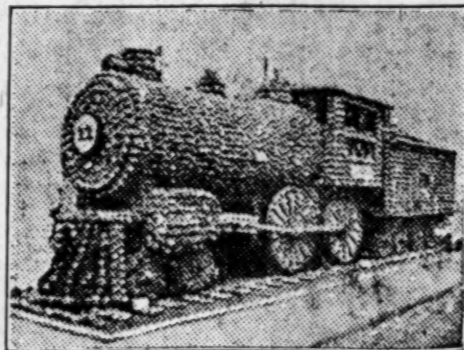

Back in the darkness Madeline Traile was standing on the carpet of truth talking to Felton about the strange demonstration they had witnessed.

"I told you before dinner I would ask you to add another story to those connected with this prayer carpet," he said tenderly. "I want it to be the beautiful story of our love. Can you love me, Madeline? Will you love me?"

Madeline stretched out her hands to his, with a sighing little laugh. "I am standing here, Alex, and I must tell the truth. Yes, I can, and I will. You know the rest."

For the Children

A Locomotive Entirely
Covered With Apples.

At a horticultural fair in Sebastopol, Cal., one of the most interesting exhibits was an apple locomotive on an apple track on apple ties, says the St. Nicholas, from which the accompanying picture is reproduced. It required several thousand apples to make this unique design.

The framework was twenty-six feet long and six feet high, and the engine was complete, at least as to its outward appearance. The driving wheels were operated by a concealed electric motor. When the power was turned this fruit engine moved along on its track.

Making Scrap Books.

The very best kind of scrap book for the nursery is one made of linen, colored cambric or muslin. Cut four pieces, 24 by 12 inches, and buttonhole stitch the edges. Then stitch down the middle, fold over and stitch again along the folded edges to make the book stay shut. The edges may be scalloped instead of buttonhole. Advertisements may be cut from newspapers and magazines and by combining them make very funny pictures.

Another kind of scrap book can be made from a blank book which has all of the leaves cut across about a third of the way down. Cut from picture cards or old books figures of men, women, boys or girls, and cutting off the heads, paste the bodies on the larger part of the page and the heads on the smaller part so they just fit together. By only turning part of the pages, either the upper or lower, at a time, each body can be made to fit a different head. But you must be careful to paste the pictures so that any head will join any body. A linen book can be made in the same way.

Make the paste by mixing one half cup of flour with cold water to make a smooth thin batter. Stir continually. Remove from the fire as soon as it boils and add three drops of cloves.

Joke on the Joker.

When Professor Scheffel, the German poet, was staying in Italy for the benefit of his health he received from a friend in Berlin an unstamped letter containing nothing but the following words: "I am quite well. Yours truly, E." Annoyed at having to pay double postage, the poet packed in a case a very large stone and dispatched it to his friend by express, collect. The latter, in the belief that the package contained something of considerable value, willingly paid the high charges and opened the case. His feelings may be better imagined than described when he saw the stone and the label attached to it, which bore the following words: "On receipt of the news as to the state of your health my heart was relieved of this load."

Presence of Mind.

A startling incident is related of an officer in the Twelfth hussar regiment who was riding with the troops in the neighborhood of the garrison of Merseburg when suddenly his horse, a high mettled charger, took fright and bolted. His efforts to restrain the animal were fruitless. Giving the horse the rein, the officer waited for a chance to spring from the saddle. To his dismay, the animal suddenly swerved toward a piece of level ground which ended in a cliff overhanging the shore. In a few moments both horse and rider would be over the edge. But a bright flash was seen for a moment, and the saber of the officer fell with deadly effect upon the head of his steed. Just in time the officer leaped from the saddle and escaped.

What Lucy Knew.

Mother was very busy dusting and straightening up the house. Little Lucy was helping.

"I declare," said mother, "I never saw so much dust. I wonder where it comes from."

"If I knew I'd tell you," answered Lucy.

"You don't even know what dust is."

"Oh, yes, I do, mother! It is mud with the juice squeezed out."

When Mary Reads.

When Mary reads at school, you know, she speaks the words off very slow—"I see-a-boy," and things like that. And "Thomas-have-you-seen-the-cat?" And teacher says (don't ever tell) that Mary can't read very well.

But when she reads to Bob and me we scarcely wait to stop for tea.

She reads the most surprising things. Of birds that talk and beasts with wings, and mother always smiles to see When Mary reads to Bob and me.

It doesn't matter what the book. Dear Mary only has to look To see the nicest stories there. She took Bob's speller, I declare, And sweeter tales there could not be Than those she read to Bob and me!

And so we're sure that teacher's wrong And Mary'll head the class ere long. For, though the grown folks all can tell What words the hardest letters spell, It's wonderful a girl so small Can read what isn't there at all!

Cottolene

"Nature's Gift

Sunny South"

It's too late to lock the stable when the horse has been stolen—too late to care for your stomach when indigestion is upon you. Why not take time by the forelock by dispensing with hog lard—the breeder of nine-tenths of all indigestion, and insist instead that all your food be cooked with Cottolene—a pure, vegetable shortening which makes healthy, digestible food?

Cottolene comes from the cotton fields of the Sunny South. It is a clean product, protected by patent air-tight tin pails to insure freshness and freedom from contamination. It is recommended by physicians as being fully as healthful as olive oil.

His Recommendation.

A girl named Nora O'Brien had been employed as housemaid for a week, so an English story runs, during which time she had drunk the contents of a bottle of choice whisky. She became dissatisfied with her position and asked her employer for a "character." Her employer wrote, "Nora O'Brien has been in my employ only a week, but I know that there is much that is good in her."

Made the Most of It.

A typographical change, which was not exactly an error, recently cost an Indianapolis printer $5 when he had expected to send only 10 cents. The printer in question was busy a few days ago, when he was called on by an itinerant member of the craft, who asked for 10 cents with which to buy some liquid refreshment. Not having 10 cents in change, the printer hastily wrote an order on a downtown saloon, as follows:

"Please let bearer have one good drink and charge same to —"

When later he went to pay the bill it was $5, and he at once raised objections. The original order was produced, when it was found that the itinerant had changed the "I" in the word "drink" to "u," making the paper good for "one good drunk." It had taken fifty glasses of booze to satisfy the altered conditions of the order to the satisfaction of the bearer. —Indianapolis News.

He Wouldn't Bribe Them.

One of the cleverest bits of electioneering dodgery engineered in England was devised by an agent who had been forbidden to corrupt the electors. He called a meeting and attended with his pockets full of gold. "I have to inform you, gentlemen," he began, "that there is to be no bribery on our side during this election. (Hear, hear.) For my part I do not intend to give away a penny piece. (Uneasy silence.) But I am afraid there are some d—d rascals in this room and that presently they will lay me on the table and take 500 sovereigns out of my pockets." The next few minutes he spent upon the table.

It Suited Him.

Garrett P. Serviss, the noted science writer, said at the Brooklyn University club apropos of Halley's comet:

"The ignorant and superstitious dread that the comet evoked in some quarters reminds me of the Millerites. The Millerites back in seventy-two, when Grant was up for a second term, were preaching the immediate destruction of the world. They were even giving their property away."

"Well, at a Millerite camp meeting one night in Maine a Millerite preacher preached that the end of the world would come on Oct. 1, just a month before election."

"The preacher noticed a man in a front sent who manifested every symptom of satisfaction whenever the date was driven home. Perplexed, he accosted the man at the end of the service and asked him why he had shown pleasure over such a terrible matter."

"Anything to beat Grant!" was the reply."—Washington Post.

Attacks School Principal.

A severe attack on school principal, Chas. B. Allen, of Sylvania, Ga., is thus told by him. "For more than three years," he writes, "I suffered indescribable torture from rheumatism, liver and stomach trouble and diseased kidneys. All remedies failed till I used Electric Bitters, but four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me completely." Such results are common. Thousands bless them for curing stomach trouble, female complaints, kidney disorders, biliousness, and for new health and vigor. Try them. Only 50c. at Fariss-Klutzn Drug Co.

Elit For Sex Frankness.

Dr. Charles W. Elliot, president emeritus of Harvard university, is one of those who believe that sex hygiene should be taught in the public schools. "The only alternative for education in sex hygiene," he declared in a paper read recently by Dr. Luther H. Gulick to the American School Hygiene association, "is the prolongation of the present awful wrongs and woes in the very vitals of civilization."

Dr. Elliot believes that to prevent the disasters to the young that arise from ignorance systematic instruction should be given in the processes of reproduction and the consequences that follow violations of the laws of nature. "The policy of science has failed everywhere," he urged. "If any one protests that this educational process will abolish innocence and make matter of common talk the tenderest and most intimate concerns in human life let him consider that virtue and not innocence is manifestly God's object and end for humanity."

The Scrap Book

Then He Flew.

A too convivially inclined young clubman was introduced at a reception to a clever society woman whom he understood in some hazy fashion to be a great artist. She was not an artist, nor had she ever made any attempt to be. But the young man, whose wife were apt to go woolgathering at times, thought she was, and he was very anxious to make a sufficiently pretty speech to her.

He murmured the usual conventionalities when he was presented and "You paint, don't you? So many people have told me about it," he then said ingratiatingly.

The young woman stared at him, looked him severely in the eyes, let her glance fall on every feature of his perplexed face, glared her indignation, and then she spoke.

"If I do," she remarked icily, "at least I don't make a mistake and put it on my nose."—Philadelphia Times.

Discontent.

The landsman through a stormy street And shades of night was going. The ground was paved with shifting steel. The wintry wind was blowing. "Heaven pity grant and help," said he, "To those who live upon the sea!"

The sailor clinched a trembling mast Mid mountains round him flowing. While through the darkness thick and fast The wintry winds were blowing. "Heaven save the landsman now," he said, "With chimneys toppling round his head!"

But when the world grew mild once more This tar, despondent growling, Said, "If I could but walk ashore, Though all the winds were blowing!"

The landsman thought, "Though storms there be, I would that I could sail the sea!" —Will Carleton.

Going the Other Way.

A St. Louis prelate is credited with this story, told by him at a recent dinner:

The head of one of the big trusts arrived at the gate of heaven and, as usual, found St. Peter on watch there. Rather pompously the trust magnate said:

"Pardon, is heaven here?"

"It is," said St. Peter. "Step right into the elevator."

After waiting for what seemed a long time the trust president said:

"I beg your pardon, but when does this elevator go up?"

"It doesn't go up," said the saint. "It goes down as soon as I get a load."

A Cutlery Salute.

Discipline aboard men-of-war belonging to tropical countries is not as strict as that obtaining on the vessels of colder countries. Indeed, in some instances it is very lax.

The Defense, a Haitian naval vessel, was lying in the harbor of Port au Prince. One day a mess cook for some reason cleaned about a peck of knives and forks on the gun deck, and being suddenly called away and not wishing to spend time to go to the galley, he seized the mess pot full of knives and forks and stuck it in the muzzle of the ten inch gun, putting the tampon in after it. About an hour afterward the admiral came aboard, and as the gun was loaded with blank cartridge they used it to fire a salute.

It happened that the gun was aimed toward the town and almost pointed blank at the Grand hotel. The guests had assembled on the porch to witness the ceremonies, when they were saluted with a rain of knives and forks, which stuck against the wooden walls like quills on a porcupine and drove the startled sightseers in a mad head over heels scramble indoors in fear of a possible shower of pots and pans and dishes.

A true friend is one who sticks to you like a porous plaster.

The Scrap Book

Misjudged.
A young woman rushed up to a man on Superior avenue the other day and shook hands with him cordially. "I have a confession to make to you," she gurgled. "You won't believe it, but I always thought you drank."
The young man fingered for a clove and tried not to blush.
"And now," she pursued, "I find that you are actually a temperance worker. Now I see you are trying to be modest and deny it, but you can never fool me again. I overheard my brother saying, in his slangy way, that you were a great booze fighter! Oh, he was in earnest. Why, he said that you had punished more of the stuff than any other ten men in Cleveland. I'm proud to know you. Will you ever pardon me for misjudging you?"
She was gone before he got through choking.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Life.
Ah, what is life, so brief at best?
A waking between rest and rest;
An insect's trail along the sand;
A gem's bright flash upon the hand;
A wave line traced on ocean's shore,
Just rippled there, then seen no more;
A breath upon a frosted pane,
A moment warmed, then chilled again;
The shadow of a cloud that stays
Until obscured by passing haze.
Canst think of aught more brief, more fleet,
To image forth Time's flying feet?
Yet in the shadow, in the breath,
Our loves awake, which know no death,
And life, which seems so brief to be,
Is crowned by immortality!

THEY DIDN'T LAUGH.

Mark Twain Was Funny, but His Audience Gave Him the Stony Stare.

There was one occasion when Mark Twain's humor went astray and instead of the hilarious laughter he expected poor Clemens got only sad and stony stares from the three literary lions at whom he had aimed his mirthful efforts as well as from the rest of the banqueters who were all worshippers of the burlesqued trio. The story is told by F. M. Colby in the Bookman:

Mark Twain had gladly accepted the invitation to address the diners and, knowing that Emerson, Longfellow and Holmes were to be among them, had prepared, in high confidence, a little skit telling of three absurd impostors who had announced themselves by these distinguished names at a miner's cabin in the far west. According to the story, a melancholy miner at whose cabin Mark Twain found shelter one night told him that three other "littery men" had stayed with him the night before and given him much trouble. They were Mr. Emerson, Mr. Longfellow and Mr. Holmes. In reply to Mark Twain's question the miner gives an account of the visit.

They were a rough lot, but that's nothing; everybody looks rough that travels afoot. Mr. Emerson was a seedy little bit of a chap, red headed. Mr. Holmes was as fat as a balloon. He weighed as much as 300 and had double chins all the way down to his stomach. Mr. Longfellow was built like a prizefighter. His head was cropped and bristly-like, as if he had a wig made of hairbrushes. His nose lay straight down on his face, like a finger with the end joint tilted up. They had been drinking. I could see that. And what queer talk they used! Mr. Holmes inspected this cabin, and then he took me by the buttonhole, and says he:

"Through the deep caves of thought I hear a voice that sings,
Build thee more stately mansions,
O my soul!"

Says I, "I can't afford it, Mr. Holmes, and, moreover, I don't want to." Blamed if I liked it pretty well, either, coming from a stranger, that way. However, I started to get out my bacon and beans when Mr. Emerson came and looked on awhile, and then he takes me aside by the buttonhole and says:

"Give me agates for my meat;
Give me cantharides to eat;
From air and ocean bring me foods,
From all zones and altitudes."

Says I, "Mr. Emerson, if you'll excuse me, this ain't no hotel."

A Fierce Night Alarm
is the hoarse, startling cough of a child, suddenly attacked by croup. Often it aroused Lewis Chamblin of Manchester, O. (R. R. No. 2) for their four children were greatly subject to croup. "Sometimes in severe attacks," he wrote "we were afraid they would die, but since we proved what a certain remedy Dr. King's New Discovery is, we have no fear. We rely on it for croup and for coughs, colds or any throat or lung trouble." So do thousands of others. So may you. Warning to Railroad Men
Look out for severe and even dangerous kidney and bladder trouble resulting from years of railroadng. Geo. E. Vell, 639 Third St., Fort Wayne, Ind., was many years a conductor on the Nickel Plate. He says: "Twenty years of railroadng laid my kidneys in terrible condition. There was a continual pain across my back and hips and my kidneys gave me much distress, and the action of my bladder was frequent and most painful. I got a supply of Foley Kidney Pills and the first bottle made a wonderful improvement and four bottles cured me completely. Since being cured I have recommended Foley Kidney Pills to many of my railroad friends." Howard Gardner.

"Foley's Honey and Tar is the best cough remedy I ever used as it quickly stopped a severe cough that had long troubled me," says J. W. Kuhn, Princeton, Nebr. Just so quickly and surely it acts in all cases of coughs, colds, la-grippe and lung trouble. Refuse substitutes. Howard Gardner.

SPRING MILLINERY.

Shapes Are Going to Be Sensible and Becoming.

ONE OF THE MEDIUM SIZED HATS.

Small and medium sized hats are to be the approved shapes in the spring, and the model illustrated is a smart representation of the prevailing type of millinery.

The hat is of light blue hemp straw covered with white dotted malline. Tiny pink gardenias with their foliage are wreathed about the hat.

Business Women's Don'ts.
When starting out to earn your own living don't think you know it all; there are a few who know very nearly as much as you do.

If your employer tells you a secret, keep that secret; store it away in a little recess of your mind and let it lie there until he asks you about it. If he doesn't ask you, it won't matter.

When you enter an office or business house for the first time do exactly as you are told; don't ask too many questions; use your eyes and see what is to be done.

Don't visit with your employer; he doesn't hire you to entertain him; his wife can do that.

Be on time—if you lose an arm to do it; get to business on time above all else, and don't be two minutes late.

Don't have friends constantly calling you on the telephone; the instrument was put into an office for business, not for visiting.

Don't think because you have read somewhere that a man has married his stenographer that your employer is going to marry you; sometimes he is married before you enter his employ.

Don't think that because your employer is sitting at his desk and apparently doing nothing he wants you to talk to him; sometimes his mind is on a weighty problem and he doesn't need your help in planning it out.

Be pleasant as soon as you step inside the office; nobody wants to know about your own troubles; your time is not your own now; it belongs to someone else, and he doesn't hire you to look gloomy.

Be loyal to the man or woman who employs you; if you know he is doing wrong don't censure him; make as good an impression on him as you can; one human being cannot judge another.

The New Peasant Waist.

peasant lines, with tiny buttons set in rows on front and sleeves. The arrangement of pin tucks in front gives fullness over the bust and is a good idea.

Crocheted Purse.
Here are simple directions for crocheting a purse with wool or silk. Commence with thirty-seven chain. Take turning three chain to turn. Turn and work one treble in each chain, turn and continue the same till you have the required length. Remember that the work has to be doubled from beginning to end to form two sides.

When you have the length desired, start decreasing one stitch at each end until all the stitches are done. This point forms the turn over flap. Double the work and sew neatly on the wrong side, turn back and sew a patent fastener to the under side of the flap, which fastens to the purse itself.

If you wish to fasten the purse around your neck, fasten your thread at one end of the purse and work eighty chain and attach the opposite side. Buy a brass ring and double crochet around it, catching it into the eighty chain in the center. Pass the cord to go around the neck through this ring and the purse is completed.
